Kay socks it to you

As a teenager in Leeds, Kay Mellor was stick-thin. She hated it. She used to wear three pairs of socks to make her legs look fatter, and cross her legs in a certain way to make her calves fill out. Much later, after bearing two daughters (one the former Coronation Street actress Gaynor Faye, pictured left with Kay), she felt that she was overweight, so, like millions of other middle-aged women, she dieted. And later still, put all this weight-related angst to good use by writing her enjoyable drama series Fat Friends, in which Gaynor stars.

Mellor became a mum at 16, and thought forlornly that motherhood would never allow her a career, nor even afford her much of a life. She could hardly have been more wrong. Indeed, she is an inspiration to anyone in the same boat, for she worked her socks off (and when you start with three pairs on, that means a lot of work) to become what she is today, one of Britain's leading television writers.

Fat Friends follows such hits as Band of Gold and Playing the Field, all set in her beloved Yorkshire, and all meticulously researched. I ask what inspired her to write Fat Friends? 'At the time, you couldn't pick up a paper without reading about Posh Spice or Vanessa Feltz,' she says. 'It seemed as if everything I read was about weight. I'd say to people, "How are you?" They'd say they'd put on a stone or whatever, and I thought, "Why do they talk about their weight before their wellbeing?" We all want to be slimmer, because thinness is associated with control and success. That's what I wanted to write about.'

The sitcom syndrome

David Baddiel recoils from the suggestion that he is some sort of Renaissance Man, even though he graduated from Cambridge, forged a successful career in stand-up comedy, became a television star, and helped to give the nation a new football anthem.

More recently, he has written two best-selling novels, one of which is to become a film, and now, in collaboration with journalist Peter Bradshaw, he has completed a sitcom, Baddiel's Syndrome, for Sky One. But the Renaissance Man label is all wrong, he insists. 'I am basically just a writer who occasionally gets up and performs, and happen to have done it in more than one medium,' he says, modestly. 'It's not like being a welder who also flies aeroplanes.' Now there's an idea for a sitcom. Baddiel's Syndrome, by contrast, stars Baddiel as an architect with a failing business and a troubled love life. An impressive list of supporting acts includes Stephen Fry and Morwenna Banks.

Baddiel says he does not wish to invite comparisons with the most successful sitcom of all time, but admits to being influenced by it. 'I find Seinfeld exciting in the sense that there is so much crammed into an episode, yet there is still such ease. For years American stand-up comedians, like Seinfeld, Roseanne and Cosby, have put their stand-up personas into sitcoms and barely adjusted them at all. We don't do that here. Our sitcoms feature comic actors or character comedians, like Caroline [Aherne] and Steve [Coogan].'

With Baddiel's Syndrome, however, Baddiel, like Seinfeld, plays a heightened version of himself. He and Bradshaw have assembled an American-style team (including Jonathan Ross) to refine each script, and the first series kicks off with 13 episodes, whereas British sitcoms rarely run beyond six.

But Baddiel's Syndrome does not adhere to the American model in every respect. In Stateside sitcomland everyone gets wheelbarrow-loads of dollars. In Britain, the incentives for bright young things to write comedy are, by comparison, pitiful. As Baddiel says: 'People come out of Harvard and think,"Shall I be a lawyer, an accountant or a sitcom writer?" Because sitcom writers there can get $90,000 an episode. It's not quite the same at Sky.' All the same, if anyone can bring American sitcom techniques successfully across the Atlantic, Baddiel can.

Have you Hurd the news?

Emma Hurd's politics degree from the London School of Economics has stood her in good stead. This engaging and intrepid 31-year-old has reported for Sky News from political and military battle zones all over the world, covering the Omagh bombing in Northern Ireland and encountering great danger in southern Lebanon and Kosovo. And yet the only physical harm she has sustained in the course of duty came in London SW1. As soon as news came through that Princess Diana had died in a car crash, Hurd was despatched to Buckingham Palace, where, with anger mounting towards the media in the belief that they had somehow caused Diana's death, a man punched her. 'He hit me hard on my back. I'm not sure if he actually said, "It was you what killed her," but it was that sort of thing,' she says.

One hopes that she will be safer in Washington DC. For Hurd has just landed one of the most prestigious jobs that Sky News can offer, becoming US correspondent. 'I have wanted this job for years,' she tells me. 'In fact, there is such interest in American affairs that I might be on air more that I want to be, especially with a new administration in place.'

Emma took her first teetering steps towards America at Radio Lincolnshire, covering Boston, Lincs, rather than Boston, Mass. She worked there while at school and then 'much to my horror' ended up there again, after graduating from LSE and completing a postgraduate course in journalism. What, I wonder, was the biggest story she covered on local radio? 'They'd released some otters back into the wild in eastern Lincolnshire, and the local residents were in uproar because their ponds were being raided. I remember going to one chap's house and he led me straight to the freezer. He'd kept a half-chewed goldfish just to show me.'

It wasn't Watergate, or even ottergate, but it was a start.

Sky News, news on the hour

Dream a little dream ...

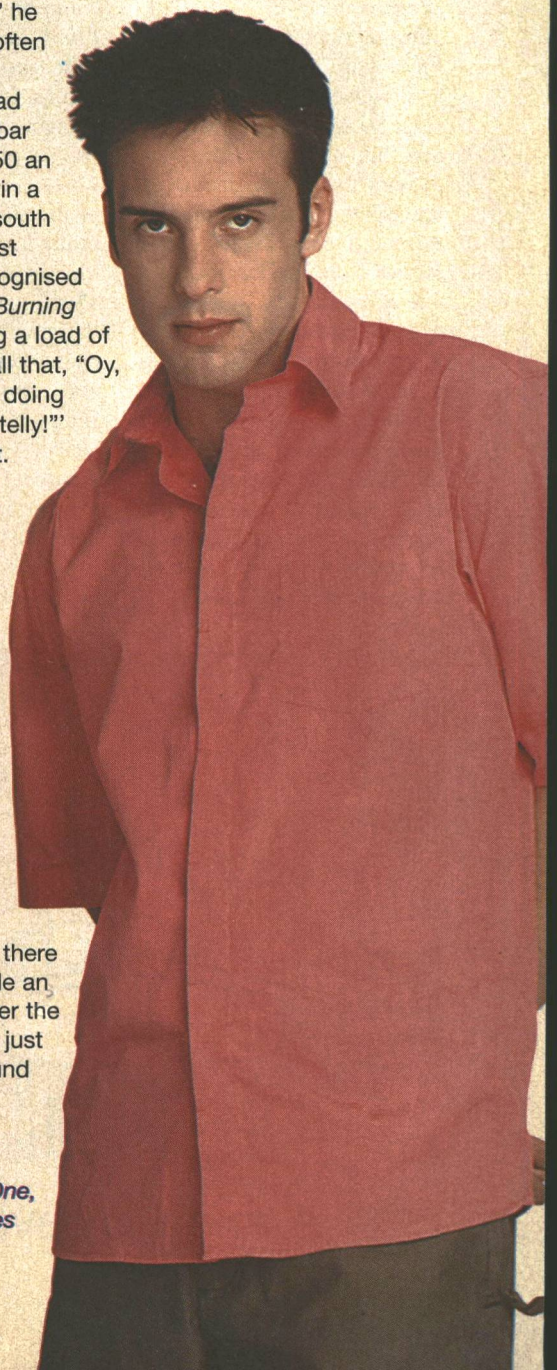
Goalkeeping is not an entirely mysterious art to Jim Alexander, who plays Harchester United's brilliant young shot-stopper Jamie Parker, in Sky One's football drama Dream Team. He informs me that he played in goal for his school when he was 'about ten'. Cricket was his first love, however. He played for Surrey schoolboys as a batsman and leg-spinner, and liked to field at gully, where he threw himself around a bit, hardly realizing that the ability to dive this way and that would one day be put to serious professional use.

Jamie Parker and his model wife Tash are, confides Alexander, supposed to be based on David and Victoria Beckham. As a goalkeeper, though, Alexander likes to think of his alter ego as more of a Fabien Barthez, the charismatic Frenchman who plays for Manchester United. His own favourite team is a slightly less glamorous outfit, Crystal Palace. 'I went to see them against Leeds, years ago, and they won 3-1. I fell in love with them. All my friends supported Liverpool but I thought there was no point doing that. They were too predictable. They just kept winning.'

Clearly, it is not in Alexander's nature to hitch himself to a winning team. He starred in the popular ITV series London's Burning but decided to leave after two seasons, even though they wanted him to stay. 'I was out of work for four months afterwards,' he reports. 'And I did often think I'd made the wrong decision. I had to start looking for bar work again, for £3.50 an hour, and got a job in a place in Clapham [south London]. But the first person I served recognised me from London's Burning and I started getting a load of hassle, you know, all that, "Oy, mate, what are you doing here, you're on the telly!"' So he promptly quit. Then, in the nick of time, came an offer to join Dream Team.

Speaking of which, we've heard about his team, but what are his dreams? 'I'd love to work with Gary Oldman. He's my hero. He came to our graduation at [the south-east London drama school] Rose Bruford College, because he'd been there and was being made an honorary fellow. After the ceremony he didn't just leave, he hung around for ages talking to us. I thought that was amazing.'

Dream Team, Sky One, new series continues Sundays, 7.00pm



Millennium mysteries revealed

Fans of Millennium will soon find out what's in store for Frank Black after last season's dramatic cliffhanger. Words: Paul Simpson

AT LAST the wait is nearly over! The last time viewers saw Millennium's Frank Black was in The X-Files episode 'Millennium', set at the very end of 1999. But how had Frank reached the point at which Mulder and Scully found him? Soon the truth will be revealed when the third season of Millennium appears on Sci-Fi.

During the second season, Frank had been taken on a hero's adventure. Producers Glen Morgan and James Wong took him away from the security that his 'yellow house' represented and threw him into turmoil. He lost his father, his trusted colleague Lara Means was committed to a mental asylum, and his wife died from a genetically engineered virus.

The Millennium Group, for whom Frank was working, was much more than just a group of former FBI employees – it was a society of murderers and mystics at war with itself. At the end of the season, a freshly white-haired Frank Black was seen staring into the future, with his daughter Jordan (Brittany Tiplady) the only ray of hope in his life.

The third season tries to bring Frank back on track, as he becomes involved more regularly with the FBI and is frequently teamed with new agent Emma Hollis (Klea Scott).

Lance Henriksen, who was Chris Carter's first choice for the role of Frank, sums up the colleagues' relationship as a realistic one: 'There's no plan,' he says. 'It's like real people. I don't know what's going to come out of my mouth next. I'd rather have the challenge – that's my view.'

Scott agrees: 'Originally [my character] sought Frank out as someone in the Bureau who was a legend. In the very first episode, I wanted to attach myself to him while he was here. We keep finding ourselves together – sometimes I seek out Frank, sometimes Frank requests me. It's not established that we are partners.

'It's a bit like the best of real relationships in that people are valued independently,' Henriksen adds: 'I think the problem with the other relationships that I had for the last two years was that those characters tended to merge. In a relationship, if the people merge, without retaining their individuality, it's death.'

Henriksen is supportive of the series, recognising that there are compromises in television, particularly with 22 hours of episodes to be shot in a short space of time. 'You're not going to be disappointed,' he promises. 'The writers are driving us insane, and challenging us. It's not going to be a cakewalk!'

With ntl, for little more than the price of a night's video rental (and without the hassle of returning it the next day) you could get a week's worth of movies on Sky MovieMax.

For a little extra (say the price of a tub of popcorn in your local cinema), you could subscribe to Sky Premier.

And for less than the price of the average cinema ticket, you could get both channels. But that's not all. As a bonus, we'll also throw in Sky Cinema and The Disney Channel.

If you want to know what films you can expect, and on what channel, have a flick through the Cable Guide you're holding.

In the meantime, here's a selection of what's on offer during January and February.

For starters, there's The Mummy, featuring Brendan Fraser and some special effects that'll take your breath away. There's also the action-packed Who Am I?, starring the ever watchable Jackie Chan. And finally, a second helping of Mike Myers' sixties comic creation in Austin Powers 2.

Yeah baby – to coin a phrase.

Slayer Belle

Everyone's favourite vampire slayer, Buffy, is back for a fifth season and, as Sarah Michelle Gellar tells Lawrie Masterson, the show continues to go from strength to strength

AS IF Buffy hasn't faced off against enough formidable adversaries during the past four years, now she's about to encounter the baddest bloodsucker of them all – Dracula.

In something of a homage to classic horror movies, Buffy the Vampire Slayer's creator Joss Whedon kicks off the fifth season of the series with an episode of classic confrontation titled, simply, Buffy versus Dracula.

But if the show's star, Sarah Michelle Gellar, is concerned that she's not up to the challenge, then she's not showing it.

'We actually used to be married,' she says of Rudolf Martin, who plays Drac. 'He was my first husband on [the daytime soap] All My Children when I was 15 years old.'

Gellar approaches the episode and the new season with a cool confidence which belies her 23 years, despite the fact that she has just wandered on to the Buffy set in a studio at Santa Monica, California, and sat in a chair so low that she can barely see over the table in front of her.

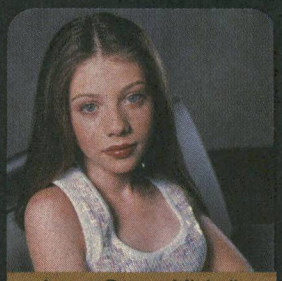
'I'm in the short seat,' she jokes. 'Can somebody get me a phone book, please?'

After a replacement chair is provided, she continues: 'Dracula was really a tool for us to kick off this season's story line. He is about reminding Buffy who she is and why she has this job.'

While Buffy the Vampire Slayer is produced for the WB cable channel in America and will never threaten ratings giants such as ER and The West Wing, the series and Gellar show no signs of slowing up.

'People always ask me if I'm burnt out, if I still want to continue doing it, and, you know, every summer you sit back and you take that look,' Gellar says.

'I couldn't do this show if it wasn't something I was still proud of, something that I love doing. I'm not going to say I don't get tired and the hours aren't long, but I feel like we are doing something really special and it's only got better.



A new Dawn: Michelle Trachtenberg joins Buffy

'The addition of Buffy's sister [Dawn, played by Michelle Trachtenberg from Harriet the Spy] is such a wonderful sort of juxtaposition, because Buffy has always talked about having this dual life.

'Now you're going to really see her home life and see her take care of this younger sister. We're still making really interesting television. If all of a sudden everyone felt really stale then maybe we'd all have to sit down and say, "Do we have more stories to tell?" Right now we have a lot more stories to tell.'

And, for the time being, anyway, Buffy remains a snug fit for Gellar herself.

'We're a family here,' she says. 'I can tell you the wives and the husbands of every person who works here. I know when their children's birthdays are and what grades they're in. It's a very, very safe atmosphere.

'And I'm lucky that I have a very understanding boyfriend [actor Freddie Prinze Jr] who likes to visit sets.'

As she starts her fifth year as Buffy, Gellar realises what a significant part of her young life the series has occupied.

'I celebrated my 19th birthday when we shot the pilot and I'll be celebrating my 24th soon, and that's incredible,' she says. 'They're pivotal years and you're doing some of your biggest growing.

'When I started, everybody else on the show was over 21 and on Friday nights they would all go have a beer afterwards. I'd have to say, "I'm kind of tired, you know", because no-one would remember I wasn't 21 and couldn't go with them.'

Almost an angel

DAVID BOREANAZ'S centuries-old vampire, Angel, discovered at the end of the first series of the Buffy spin-off that he will become human once more – but that's a long way off. His office was destroyed, so he and associates Cordelia Chase (Charisma Carpenter) and former Watcher Wesley (Alexis Denisof) operate out of Cordelia's apartment at the start of the new series (Sky One, Fridays from 5th, 9.00pm). In the new episode Are You Now or Have You Ever Been, Angel revisits a rundown hotel, with sinister links to his past, and sets up a new office there.

Boreanaz loved the episode's flashback sequences: 'We usually go back to the 1800s or the 1700s. Here, it's the 1950s,' he explains. 'It has a little bit of a James Dean vibe.' The journeys back to Angel's past are a popular aspect of the series. 'We're doing one that involves myself, Spike, Drusilla, Darla and the Master,' Boreanaz adds. 'It's going to be wild.'

Crossovers between Buffy and Angel are less likely this season. Executive producer David Greenwalt says: 'We'd love to see Buffy – it's just a matter of can we physically do it?'

The biggest surprise of all is the return of Darla, Angel's sire (the person who turned him into a vampire), brought back from Hell by evil law firm Wolfram & Hart. Angel starts to obsess about her and his friends are worried about him. 'We made a big stink about this not being done very often,' series co-creator Joss Whedon points out, 'because I didn't want to just bring anybody back. I did it with Darla because I specifically needed Julie [Benz].' And as we'll see, both Whedon and Wolfram & Hart have very clear plans for her ...

Just the ticket

As a 1958 London double-decker bus makes its way across the Americas in an epic 20,000-mile journey to raise money for charity, actor Neil Morrissey tells Daphne Lockyer about his involvement in this unusual venture

All aboard: Neil and his fellow travellers, including Hugo Speer (above, in black), and friend Adrian Dunbar (below)

ACTOR Neil Morrissey tends to attract a lot of tabloid attention about his love life, which naturally annoys him; why, he wonders, can't his work with the international charity War Child garner such coverage?

'Fortunately, I don't tend to read any newspapers at all. So who cares?' he says. 'There are more important things in life to care about.'

Like helping to alleviate the suffering of some of the millions of children around the world affected by war and upheaval in their countries.

Neil has been an active patron of War Child for years – along with other actors, such as one of his best friends, Adrian Dunbar, and The Full Monty's Hugo Speer – and in that time he has visited eight of the charity's projects in countries such as Rwanda, Kosovo and the Sudan.

'I love acting,' he says, 'but getting out to these places, getting your feet in the mud and holding these kids, is the most rewarding and satisfying thing that I have ever done.'

This month sees the debut of a 13-part UK Horizons documentary, Ticket To Ride, narrated by Morrissey, which follows the adventures of six twentysomethings on a journey across America in a 1958 double-decker bus. If they succeed, their efforts will raise £200,000 for War Child.

The eight-month journey, which started in September, covers the 20,000 miles that lie between Halifax in Canada and Tierra del Fuego in South America. Apart from its voyeuristic Big Brother appeal, it also has some deeply altruistic aims. Besides fund-raising, travellers on board the big red bus will also source worthwhile projects in America for War Child to get involved in.

'This programme works on so many levels,' Morrissey says. 'It's partly travelogue, partly Castaway and partly a hugely enterprising way of doing something that can make a difference to people who need and deserve our help.'

For the 38-year-old actor, working with War Child is an antidote to the more corrupting aspects of fame and success, which he's had in spades since playing the hilariously unevolved Tony in Men Behaving Badly.

'It redresses the balance,' he says, 'because with the kind of life that I lead it would be easy to get carried away with yourself. It helps you get your feet back on the ground and reiterates my confidence that I can actually have a conversation with people without them fawning all over me or thinking I'm something extraordinary, just because I'm on the television. These people have no idea who I am and that's really quite a relief.'

He was drawn in particular to War Child because of its philosophy that children hold the key to the future.

He is aware, too, he says, when he looks at his own 11-year-old son, Sam (by ex-wife, actress Amanda Noar), that he is very much 'the next phase'.

'Sam,' he says, 'is paramount in my life. He is my life. He is the most gorgeous, wonderful, amazing boy. He is my answer to the question, "What's the meaning of life?"'

'Life's not a destination, it's a journey, isn't it?' he asks. 'And fortunately, I'm still on it.'

A journey as fascinating as the one currently under way on the big red bus?

'Definitely,' he laughs.

The world according to Lithgow

He started acting at the age of two and has covered everything from Shakespeare to the sitcom. Gentle giant John Lithgow speaks to Brian Viner about life, the universe and 3rd Rock from the Sun ...

JOHN LITHGOW gives my question some thought. If he really were an alien newly landed on the third rock from the sun – as in the acclaimed sitcom of that name, which, as the bumbling Dick Solomon, he so enhances – what would please him about the human race, and what would horrify him? He is a deeply thoughtful man.

'I would be horrified about how combative we are, how we are fouling our own nest, that we are so tribal, that we can't reach any kind of unanimity about anything. That's what aliens would spot right away. But human beings would also delight them, I think. They are wonderful, ridiculous creatures, so redeemed by their sense of humour and capacity to love.'

This is a lovely answer, entirely characteristic of Lithgow. The 6ft 4in actor's gentle charm is apparent even down a phone line from Westwood, California, where he lives with his wife, Mary Yeager, a professor of economic history at the University of California, Los Angeles. They have two grown children (Lithgow also has a son, Ian, from a previous marriage, who has a recurring role in 3rd Rock as one of Dick's dimwitted students), but he devotes much of his spare time to entertaining the under-tens, rewriting the lyrics of old novelty songs and performing them with orchestras, most recently the Chicago Symphony. He's also made a video called John Lithgow's Kid-Size Concert. 'The kids go insane for it,' he says. It is a rare show of immodesty.

I have interviewed dozens of American television big shots and none has entranced me as much as Lithgow, with the possible exception of Matt Groening, creator of The Simpsons. Groening is similarly wise, eloquent, self-deprecating, and both men are engagingly surprised to find themselves feted wherever they go.

Lithgow was a moderately successful stage and movie actor until 3rd Rock from the Sun came along. Now he is an established, Emmy Award-winning star, but sensibly wary of stardom.

'French Stewart [one of his 3rd Rock co-stars] said a very funny thing,' he says. 'He went to a Seven-11 store and bought a Slurpee. He went home and news of this transaction was on the internet. His response was, "Uh-oh, I guess I have to be nice now for the rest of my life."'

How much does fame intrude in Lithgow's life, I wonder? 'Not so much. On the whole, life is far more similar than different. It has been quite a scrupulous intention of ours to live in the same house, keep the same friends. I remain quite aloof from the entertainment industry in LA, I'm more of a faculty spouse than anything else. But it certainly is curious to hear your birthday announced on the radio. I must have had 50 happy birthday greetings on my drive to work the other day, which of course was very nice.'

He was born – just over 55 years ago – into a theatrical family. His father created outdoor drama festivals across the American Midwest and Lithgow made his stage debut, aged two, as one of Nora's children in Ibsen's A Doll's House. In the late 1960s, after graduating from Harvard, he moved to London and studied with the Royal Shakespeare Company, where he found himself as American dialect coach to acting giants such as Peggy Ashcroft and Michael Hordern. He remains hugely fond of Britain and the British.

'I saw Olivier and was completely overwhelmed, although my British contemporaries were not so impressed ... they all wanted to be Marlon Brando. Oh, I had a wonderful time, staying out of the Vietnam War and making some marvellous friends. David Suchet remains my most estimable friend from those days. I have since become friendly with Jonathan Pryce and Jim Broadbent. And Diana Rigg is a great friend.' He chuckles, 'Nobody drinks like British actors.'

'I saw Olivier and was completely overwhelmed, although my British contemporaries were not so impressed'

After returning to America – 'with an insufferable British accent' – Lithgow began to land film roles, but few people sat up and took notice until he played a transsexual ex-football player in The World According to Garp in 1982 and Debra Winger's lover in Terms of Endearment in 1983; both roles earned him Oscar nominations.

From then on he was hardly out of work, but his career took an improbable change of direction one morning in April 1994, at the Four Seasons Hotel in LA, when his friends Bonnie and Terry Turner asked him to consider a role in their new sitcom about befuddled aliens on Earth.

'That day changed everything, in fact we go back on the same day every year to have breakfast,' he says. 'I had no intention of doing episodic TV, but it wasn't so much a pitch, more of an ambush. And I had fallen into a kind of Basil Rathbone mode, playing elegant villains all the time. I thought this was a way to change it. Also, the material made me laugh so much. It is a great part for me. I can really strut my stuff.'

Long may he continue to do so.

Joseph Barbera has notched up directorial credits on some 200 cartoons during his six decades in the business – but still he keeps working. His latest project is a new back-to-basics Tom and Jerry short. Interview: Ivan Waterman

THE LEGENDARY Joseph Barbera is the elder statesman of animation. During a career that has spanned 60 years, Barbera (pictured above in 1986) has helped breathe life into some of cartoondom's most adored characters, including Tom and Jerry, Yogi Bear, The Flintstones and Scooby-Doo. You would be forgiven for thinking that, having reached the grand old age of 89, Barbera would allow himself some well-deserved down time, comfortable in the knowledge that he has illuminated so many lives with his animated classics. But that's just not his style. 'Can't rest, won't rest,' he grins. 'Some people are just at their best when they're on the move. That's me.'

The New York-born Barbera first hooked up with William Hanna, his long-time collaborator, at MGM Studios in 1940, when they worked on Puss Gets the Boot, a cartoon that featured prototypes of their most famous characters, Tom and Jerry. The animators would form an intuitive and astonishingly creative partnership, and they remained at MGM for the best part of 20 years, after which they formed their own company, Hanna-Barbera, and gave us the likes of Huckleberry Hound, The Jetsons, Top Cat and dozens of other favourites.

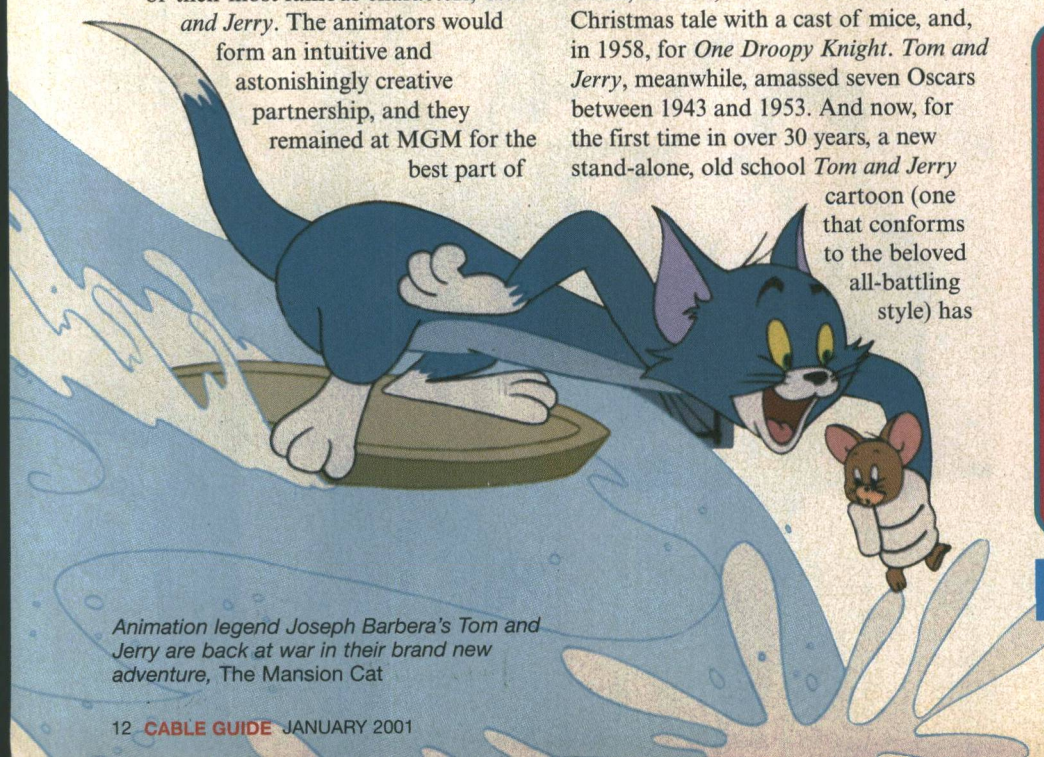
Though he would be too modest to say so, he has arguably had more influence on American popular culture than any leading political figure. 'I just have this thing about making folk laugh,' he shrugs. 'Nothing has changed. I think once you're an entertainer, rather than a film-maker, the whole thing becomes a drug. I am still having a great time. If anyone today allows you to work past your 70th birthday, you're kind of winning aren't you?

'It's great just walking into a room full of kids with their parents and feeling that warmth. When we [he and Hanna] were in Paris once at a tribute, the entire audience stood, not for us, but for Tom and Jerry. They see us as the puppeteers – the guys with gloves moving the characters.'

Barbera was twice nominated for an Oscar, in 1956, for Good Will to Men, a Christmas tale with a cast of mice, and, in 1958, for One Droopy Knight. Tom and Jerry, meanwhile, amassed seven Oscars between 1943 and 1953. And now, for the first time in over 30 years, a new stand-alone, old school Tom and Jerry cartoon (one that conforms to the beloved all-battling style) has been produced. It's called The Mansion Cat and will be premiered as part of the New Year's Day Tom and Jerry Marathon on Cartoon Network. Barbera also supplies the voice of the mansion owner who leaves his home in the care of his clumsy cat; the cat, of course, proceeds to wreck the place in his hilarious pursuit of the mischievous mouse.

'Tom and Jerry stand the test of time,' he says. 'There has always been this fascination with them from the beginning – their rivalry, their war. It's been ongoing. Nobody's ever going to win or get really hurt. That's part of the secret. So there's always room for another story, especially if there's a way of updating where the characters are. The techniques and the technology may change but you still need a good yarn.

'We sat down and thought of a kind of Home Alone-type story, which we hope will have a seasonal appeal. We may have aged, but time has stood still for them. Toons have all the luck, don't they?'



Animation legend Joseph Barbera's Tom and Jerry are back at war in their brand new adventure, The Mansion Cat

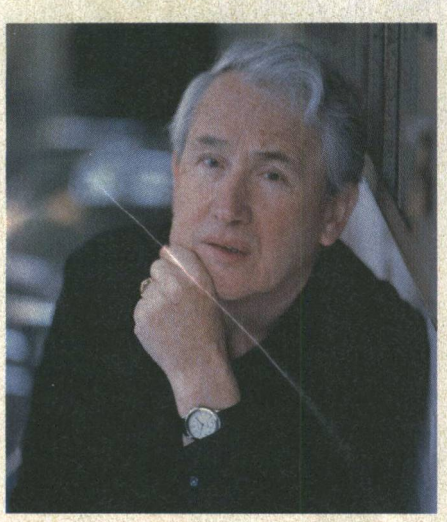
McCourt's



With its harrowing depictions of extreme poverty in Depression-era Ireland, Frank McCourt's memoir Angela's Ashes was never going to be easy to adapt for the screen. But the author tells Lawrie Masterson he was overwhelmed with the movie

FRANK McCOURT has just flown from Chicago to Los Angeles in a private jet. He doesn't know who picked up the tab and doesn't seem overly concerned.

'Somebody paid for it,' he shrugs. 'It's very glamorous.'

Such are the luxuries to which the retired English teacher has become accustomed since his Depression-era memoir Angela's Ashes became an international best seller in 1996, won him the Pulitzer Prize for Biography the following year, and was adapted into the movie starring Emily Watson and Robert Carlyle.

'It's not like that every day,' says the 70-year-old McCourt. 'I travel with ordinary people from time to time,' he laughs, adding, 'and it's very distressing!'

Read Angela's Ashes, or watch the film, and you can hardly begrudge him the enjoyment. Born in Brooklyn, New York, the eldest son of impoverished Irish immigrants Malachy and Angela McCourt, his life was so grim that his grandmother paid for the family to return to Limerick, Ireland, where matters only became worse.

Of the seven children Angela McCourt bore, only four survived. When Malachy did manage to scrape together enough money for the family to eat, he fed his alcoholism first.

But Frank McCourt, who returned to America in 1949 and lived modestly in New York until he found fame, has become an embodiment of the so-called 'American Dream', through which anyone, regardless of their humble beginnings, can achieve anything they want.

'I'm beyond it,' he says. 'I think I am some universal dream.'

His ambitions were no higher than to have a steady job in a warm building, marry a nice girl and live in the suburbs, then grow old comfortably. He had all that – then he wrote Angela's Ashes. The novel dominated The New York Times best sellers list for an incredible 117 weeks. Even before the movie was released, McCourt's sequel, 'Tis, had become his second smash.

The finished film 'moved' him, he says. Then he corrects himself: 'No, I wasn't just moved – I was overwhelmed. I could have been disappointed, but I wasn't.'

Australian writer Laura Jones was hired to adapt the book for the screen, but while McCourt says her script was 'very sensitive and tender', he believes she was tentative about what he calls 'the stink of poverty'. It wasn't until British director Alan Parker (The Commitments, Evita) came on board that the author started to feel more at ease.

'He came to grips with it,' McCourt says. 'He gave it more of a gritty, horrible feeling and between the two of them [Parker and Jones] I think they produced a miracle of a movie. I can't imagine how they could have done any better. And then the score by John Williams lifted me out of my seat.'

After holding out during the negotiation process so he could maintain as much control as possible over the film version of Angela's Ashes, McCourt made himself scarce during the shoot in Dublin, Cork and Limerick.

'I went to Dublin the first day, but I didn't stay long,' he says. 'That's a peculiar thing – I felt that I was intruding on my own life. I was saying to myself, "What are you doing here? Get off the set!" I wouldn't want anybody standing looking over my shoulder when I'm sitting at my desk writing.'

Emily Watson captured 'the same dogged anger' his mother had. 'Emily doesn't resemble her physically. My mother was heavier. But there were little things Emily did with her shoulders and her eyes, or sitting by the fire dealing with my father – a kind of wild desperation.

'A woman in my mother's position was in a corner, had to fight her way out. People say, "But why didn't she get a job?" There were no jobs. "Why didn't she divorce him?" There were no divorces. And Emily caught mainly, for me, the feeling of being trapped and waiting. You put people down like that and they are going to explode. My mother never exploded. She just got more depressed.'

Robert Carlyle, meanwhile, 'has a better head of hair' than Malachy had.

'Of course, he knew nothing about my father except what he read in the book, but he gets that kind of distance – the distance of an alcoholic. That's what Robert has in the film – that distance.'

THE THREE FACES OF FRANK

To be Frank: Director Alan Parker talks to the three young actors who portray Frank McCourt in the film

FRANK McCOURT was delighted with the three young Irish actors chosen to portray him at various ages during his childhood and adolescence – Joe Breen, who played him as a youngster, Ciaran Owens as an early teenager, and Michael Legge as a late teen approaching adulthood. But he had little to do with them during the making of the film.

'I met little Joe Breen on the classroom set but I didn't really have a conversation with him,' McCourt admits. 'I think he was in character. He wasn't saying much. And then I met the middle kid, Ciaran, but I didn't meet the older one, Michael, before doing publicity for the film in New York.

'But the boys were priceless. I was very flattered by the casting because they were all much better looking than I ever was. I don't know where they get this talent. You wonder why people go to acting school. Joe Breen didn't need to go because he's just a natural. Offscreen he is absolutely charming. I was never that. I was sullen.'

All three, he says, were excellent in their understanding of the wretched poverty that pervades the story. 'They acted it wonderfully, but they didn't think it was true. They couldn't reach back like that.'

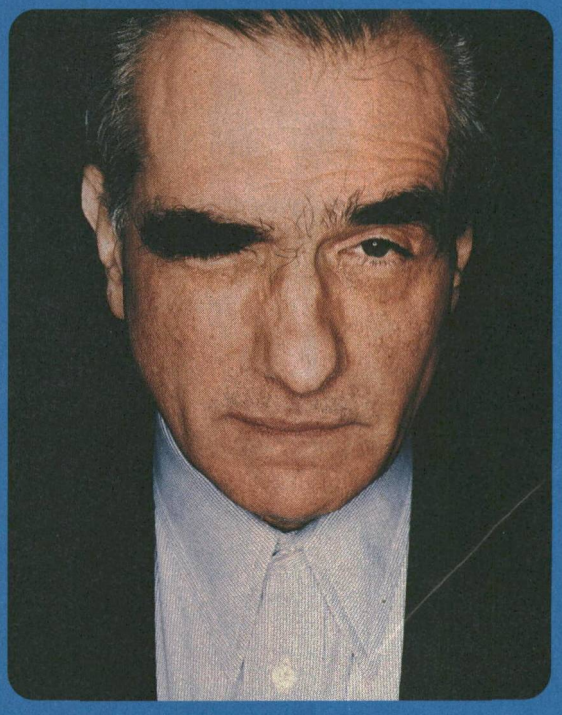
Spotlight on Martin Scorsese



Bringing Out the Dead director Martin Scorsese's filmography boasts some of the most memorable movies of the last three decades, including that seminal study in urban alienation Taxi Driver; the brutal but poetic monochrome masterpiece Raging Bull; and the exhilarating, romanticised gangster epic GoodFellas. A hugely influential film stylist, Scorsese has forged an artistically successful partnership with actor Robert De Niro, with whom he has collaborated on eight movies to date. De Niro deservedly won an Oscar for his remarkably persuasive portrayal of boxer Jake La Motta in Raging Bull, yet, criminally, Scorsese has yet to scoop the statuette himself.

KIM NEWMAN ON ...
THE BLAIR WITCH PROJECT

The scariest movie ever or over-hyped rubbish? It's been a year since The Blair Witch Project first hit our screens and it still has the power to provoke debate

LIKE Big Brother and those adjustable silver scooters, The Blair Witch Project is so much a part of our landscape that it's hard to remember just how recent an arrival it is. About 18 months ago, a friend of mine in America sent me a preview tape of a 'quirky little horror movie' he thought I might like. At that time, I'd vaguely heard of BWP because it was the first horror film to be invited to the Sundance Film Festival, and people had said it used a mock-documentary approach along the lines of video nasty Cannibal Holocaust. I sat down and watched the blurry tape, which certainly creeped me out in a way most horror films can't these days, then followed up on the web address in the end credits and checked out the now-famed Blair Witch internet site. What I found was a clever spoof, with background on the film's invented mythology and details about the search for the supposedly missing characters the movie shows wandering in the woods to meet an ambiguous but doubtless ghastly fate.

I assumed BWP would be a modest success, putting directors Daniel Myrick and Eduardo Sanchez in a position to direct a more healthily budgeted art movie and then crash Hollywood by signing up for a Batman sequel. Instead, the film became a worldwide hit. Considering estimates of its budget go as low as $27,000, this was the kind of story that makes movie people take notice – if a bunch of nobodies in the woods with camcorders can score a hit on a level with Wild Wild West, why should anyone meet the $20m demand of a big movie star? But like any film that becomes part of the cultural landscape, BWP was accused of excessive hype – though this seems to amount to putting up a website, which is hardly on a par with McDonald's tie-in stick figures. And some people just didn't get it: the improvisation, shaky camerawork, off-centre framing and sometimes hard-to-make-out soundtrack strike nay-sayers as amateurish. Plus, what is ambiguously unsettling to one viewer is annoyingly vague to another. After all, where is this witch and when is she going to show up and chew someone's head off?

A lot of people hated it because it didn't conform to their idea of a 'proper movie'. But, over a year later, the look and texture of BWP is almost orthodox – there's been a bigger budget, if unsatisfying, sequel, a sex cash-in (The Erotic Witch Project), a rip-off (The St Francisville Experiment), an I-was-here-first-but-got-released-second movie (1998's The Last Broadcast) and a compilation of short parodies (The Bogus Witch Project). If the film's power to scare declines, it may be that this activity mutes its effectiveness by making the tactics over-familiar.

In Hearts of Darkness, the documentary about the making of Apocalypse Now, director Francis Coppola envisioned a future of low-cost portable technology whereby 'some fat girl in the Midwest with a video camera' would make a movie masterpiece and change the world. Twenty years on, some film students proved him right.

RIK MAYALL

What film really inspired you as a child?
A Morecambe and Wise film called The Intelligence Men. I loved it. I saw the film with my daddy. There was a bit when a car was going around cliff tops in Monte Carlo, swerving, and I remember feeling really sick because it felt like I was in the car. I actually had to leave the cinema to be sick.

Who's your favourite movie actor?
Gene Hackman. I can't take my eyes off his face. My discipline is much more to do with interaction with the audience. It's their presence that really fires me and I think that was true of Eric and Ernie. Also, for me the Carry On films never go out of fashion. I can watch Kenneth Williams endlessly.

What's your favourite of your own movies?
I'm very proud of Richie in Guesthouse Paradiso, because Richie is me. One of the great things about comedy is that if there are things that you push down into your soul, like selfishness, you get on stage or in front of a camera and you can just open up and all the demons come out. You unleash them.

Have you got any movies in the pipeline?
There's a Merlin film just out, in which I'm Merlin (Merlin: The Return). And I recently worked with Leslie Nielsen on Kevin of the North, which comes out next year. It's a family film about a husky race. Leslie's the baddie and I'm his sidekick English baddie . Leslie's one of my heroes – I learned so much from him and he's such a nice guy.

Some like it hot

Nick Callow discovers that the heat at the Australian Open can wreck even the top players' chances, but Greg Rusedski tells Ross Biddiscombe how he hopes to come in from the cold

THE AUSTRALIAN OPEN is expected to be one of the most keenly contested events in the tennis calendar, but two of the game's leading experts fear the ultimate winner could be the weather.

Temperatures have previously soared to a blistering 50°C on the stadium courts at Melbourne's Flinders Park and have rendered even the fittest athletes incapable of performing.

Andre Agassi and Lindsay Davenport will be hoping to defend their titles in the first Grand Slam tournament of the year, but Simon Reed and former British No 1 Annabel Croft – who will both be commentating on the event for British Eurosport – believe their chances could depend on the playing conditions.

Croft, who will be returning to the Australian Open for the first time in over a decade, says: 'I'm very excited to be going back because the Australian Open is a great favourite among the players, it is such a fun tournament.

'But the weather is a major factor. I remember one Open a few years back, when the on-court temperature reached 50°C, and that is virtually impossible to play in, even if you are in top condition.'

Reed agrees: 'The conditions usually play a big part in the outcome in Australia. The heat there can be so intense that matches can become a sheer battle of fitness and willpower.

'It will be about who is the toughest competitor on the day, and that is why I cannot rule out Agassi again in the men's singles, because he revels in those sorts of conditions. That said, the event is wide open.'

There will be half a dozen contenders for the women's crown, according to Croft, but she nominates America's Wimbledon champion Venus Williams as her tip. 'Venus has to be the favourite after her amazing run last summer. She may only be ranked No 3 in the world, but for virtually all the experts she is number one after her Wimbledon and US Open victories.

'She can blow most people off the court with her power, but when she is off form she is definitely beatable. That is why I would also have to rate the chances of Lindsay Davenport and Martina Hingis,' Croft says.

'Davenport is the defending champion, but she has been injured a lot recently, so a big question mark will hang over her fitness in Australia, especially with the heat. Hingis has already won the Australian Open three times, not bad for a 20-year-old!

'Of the up-and-coming youngsters, the pick of the bunch are Kim Clijsters from Belgium and Russia's Elena Dementieva, who I think will become one of the big names during 2001 and could create a sensation.'

The men's event could feature a Russian winner if the reigning US Open champion, Marat Safin, hits top form. Reed explains: 'In my experience, the players to watch out for in Australia are the form men, and there were few better players than Safin in 2000 with his power-based game.

'But I would not rule out a British challenge from Tim Henman. I have noticed his game really go up a few notches in the past few months. He is notably physically stronger, and with that has come an extra mental toughness.

'Greg Rusedski has the power to do well, but he has not shown his best form of late, and it may be too much to expect him to go all the way this year,' says Reed.

'Either way, it promises to be one of the best tournaments of the year. It usually throws up a few surprise results, and I am really looking forward to going, as it will be my first time there and everyone connected with tennis says that it has become the best Grand Slam event to be at.'

BRITISH EUROSPORT HAS LIVE AND EXCLUSIVE COVERAGE OF THE WHOLE OF THE AUSTRALIAN OPEN FROM SUNDAY 14TH TO SATURDAY 27TH. SEE PAGE 28 FOR DETAILS

Venus Williams, the Wimbledon and US Open champion, is a major contender for the ladies' singles title

Normal service resumed?

THE FIRST SPORTING year of the millennium was memorable for many different reasons in Britain – Olympic success, England's football win over Germany in Euro 2000 and even victory for the English cricket team. But what happened to British tennis? The sport seemed to slip by almost unnoticed. And, even more intriguingly, what happened to Greg Rusedski?

Since the entry of the Canadian-born player into the British ranks in 1995, Rusedski, along with Tim Henman, has led a mini revival in tennis in the UK.

It was the tall, fast-serving left-hander who actually began this upward trend with a passionate and powerful performance at Wimbledon that year, when he lost only to Pete Sampras in the fourth round.

However, last year was one to forget for Rusedski. Slow recovery from a foot operation was compounded by further injuries and then a series of confidence-sapping first-round defeats. Although Henman battled away near the world's top 10, the sport in Britain wasn't the same without a Henman/Rusedski twin spearhead. The low point came when Rusedski's injury, combined with Britain's lack of supporting players, brought about an embarrassing Davis Cup defeat by tiny Ecuador.

'Everybody has a really tough year in their career, but I tried to battle through it,' says the former world No 4.

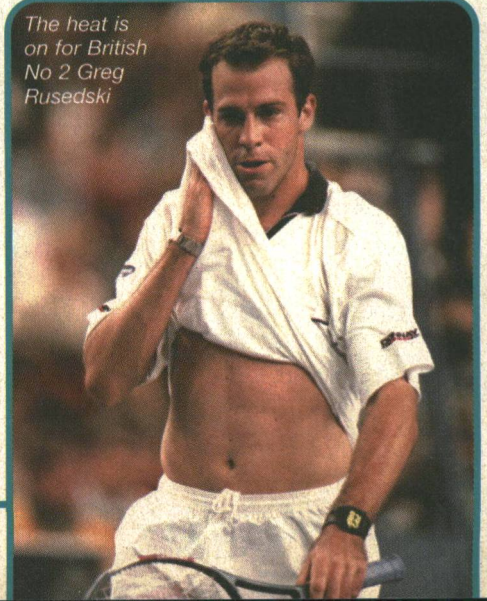
Preparations for this month's Australian Open started earlier than ever, and the new year augurs well for Rusedski, partly due to his new coach, former Wimbledon champion Pat Cash. 'Working with Pat is not going to be an every-week thing, but he'll be with me at all the majors,' says the British No 2.

His training for this first Grand Slam of the year started before Christmas at Cash's own tennis academy in Surfers Paradise, near Brisbane. 'When you're getting ready for a Grand Slam, you need to be in the best shape possible,' says the man who reached the final of the US Open four years ago.

But if not him, who does he think will win in Melbourne? 'I think Lleyton Hewitt has a great chance. If Andre Agassi is fit then he could do it again, and Yevgeny Kafelnikov has a shot because the courts favour the baseliners.'

But as a serve and volley expert, the 27-year-old will be praying for sunshine. 'I'm hoping the weather in Melbourne will be extremely hot, then the courts will be a lot faster and better for players like me.' So the heat down under could help push Rusedski back up to the top.

'When you're getting ready for a Grand Slam, you need to be in the best shape possible'



The heat is on for British No 2 Greg Rusedski

WATFORD V FULHAM

French revolution

A Fulham side, inspired by Gallic flair, clash with promotion rivals Watford. Preview by Simon Johnson

WATFORD captain Robert Page insists his team are not under pressure to beat First Division championship favourites Fulham when the sides meet at Vicarage Road.

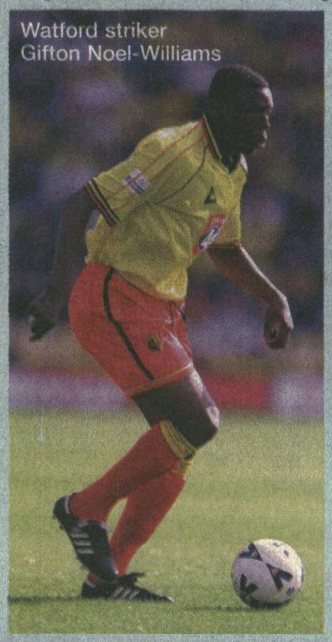
The two clubs set the pace in the race for promotion to the Premier League from the start of the season, and most experts predicted they would be playing in the top-flight next season.

But, while Fulham have consolidated their position as league leaders, Watford have seen their promotion prospects under threat from the likes of West Bromwich Albion, Birmingham City and Bolton Wanderers.

So their clash with Fulham is a crucial one. Page says: 'It is an important game, but our attitude has to be that it will be no more crucial than any other match.

'When we play Fulham we will be over the halfway point in the season, but there will still be a long way to go.

'Our aim remains to get promoted by whatever means possible – whether it be via the play-offs or the two automatic places – as long as we are in the Premier League next season I won't care how we got there.



Watford striker Gifton Noel-Williams

'We are aware that Fulham have got great ability with the ball and their players can all pass it, so we will have to get into them from the start and be wary of Louis Saha's [Fulham's French striker] pace up front.'

Fulham, meanwhile, remain supremely confident and their striker Barry Hayles, feels they can exploit weaknesses in the Watford camp.

Hayles says: 'Many teams have played Watford and lost but have still come away thinking "we could have beaten them".

'Now teams are beginning to think they can get a result against them, and we have to think the same way.'

Fulham had a little crisis of their own when they lost their 100 per cent league record in October, following 11 straight victories at the start of the season.

The west London side recovered quickly though, and Hayles insists they are reaping the benefits of French manager Jean Tigana's footballing ideology.

He adds: 'We have an advantage on the opposition because of the way we play. We keep the ball and make the other team do the hard work, which means we are the stronger side towards the end of a match.

'Hopefully that will be the same in this game.'

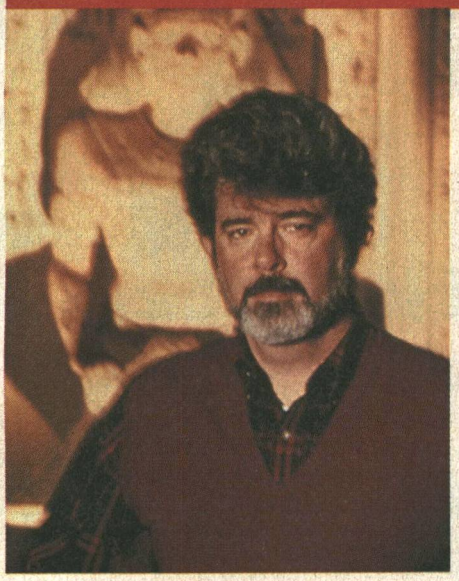
Star Wars-crossed lovers



George Lucas in Love is not a documentary about the film-maker's romantic life, but a quirky short film produced by two up-and-coming film graduates, Joe Nussbaum and Joseph Levy. The nine-minute film imagines a young Lucas, back in 1967, in his final days at film school. He has just three days left to finish his script, a story of a space farmer, tentatively titled Space Wheat, but he's struggling with writer's block. His philosophical, robe-wearing room-mate is distracting him, and he's trying to avoid his menacing, asthmatic neighbour, so he seeks out his film professor who sits cross-legged before him and speaks in backwards sentences. Looking for some thinking space, George meets Marion, a fellow student (with her hair fashioned in two buns on the sides of her head), who encourages George to write about what he knows and feels. The actors are largely unknown, but their performances are all excellent. The film graduates put this clever parody on Lucas' famous Star Wars characters together in an effort to jump-start their career in Hollywood, and it seems to have worked. After winning various awards in several film festivals throughout the US, Nussbaum and Levy have subsequently secured meetings with Columbia, DreamWorks, Miramax and Fox to discuss their script for a feature-length romantic comedy. The real George Lucas (left) has seen the film and was quoted as saying: 'It's the life story I wish I had'.

A terrible bully

For most of us, the bulk of Russia's history is nothing more than a compendium of hazy legends and sensationalist rumours. This week The History Channel does its best to quell the half-truths, as it hones in on one of Russia's most notorious rulers – its first tsar, Ivan IV, best known as Ivan the Terrible. Widely considered one of the most ruthless tyrants in history, Ivan IV was indeed an egocentric, autocratic megalomaniac, with deep-seated paranoid, neurotic, psychotic, sadistic tendencies. That said, he is a national hero in his mother country, where his nickname means 'awe-inspiring'. So, why the dual reputation, you may ask? During the early part of his reign (1547-60), Ivan proved very productive. He overhauled the government and regulated the corrupt influence of the boyars (Russian ruling classes). He reformed the church and the army, creating an elite force that allowed Russia to conquer neighbouring countries and expand its boundaries. He also established commercial links with England, France and Holland. And, being a learned man, the printing industry was introduced. But it all went horribly wrong during the latter part of Ivan's rule (1561-84). He had never been completely stable. Orphaned at seven, he was left in the abusive, mistreating hands of boyar families who lived in the palace. By his early teens, he was already displaying disturbed traits – throwing live animals from towers was said to be one of his favourite games. After his first wife's death (from poison) and a serious illness, Ivan became even more deranged. He demanded despotic rule over a part of the country that was a boyar-stronghold, and in an act of vengeance, destroyed an estimated 10,000 of them. If ever there was an argument for democracy, this is it.

When the kids are United

Harry Redknapp's West Ham United (whose Joe Cole is pictured) have proved their resilience by overcoming surprisingly poor early season form and starting their steady rise up the Premiership table. However, their trip to fortress Old Trafford on New Year's Day to face perennial title contenders Manchester United will be a real test of how far the team have progressed this term. One of the few highlights of the Hammers' summer horribilis was when they pulled off a hard-fought and deserved draw against Sir Alex Ferguson's side at Upton Park, Davor Suker and Paolo Di Canio securing a share of the spoils with their late strikes (Di Canio from the spot). But it would be best for West Ham not to dwell too long on memories of their visit to Old Trafford last season, when they lost 7-1.

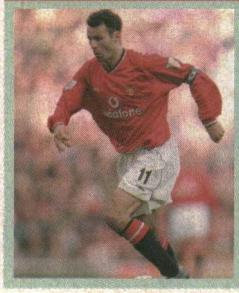
LIVE MANCHESTER UNITED V WEST HAM UNITED
SKY SPORTS 1 7.00PM

by Ross Biddiscombe



Premier League battlers West Ham meet the giants of Old Trafford in what looks set to be a scorcher of a match. Harry Redknapp's £4 million French striker Frederic Kanoute (pictured, right) will be in the spotlight as he tries to shine against a big name strike force which includes such successful home-grown talents as Welsh international Ryan Giggs (pictured, left). When the teams last met last August, the Hammers scored twice in the last five minutes to snatch a 2-2 draw.

LIVE FORD SCOTTISH FOOTBALL: ST MIRREN V RANGERS SKY SPORTS 1 7.00PM

The memory of a 7-1 drubbing two months ago will still be engraved in the minds of a struggling St Mirren side when they host Rangers at Love Street. Kenny Miller scored five in that 90-minute annihilation and he may be partnered in attack today by new signing Tore Andre Flo for whom the Gers smashed the Scottish transfer record when they paid Chelsea £12m last November. Miller and Flo should be supported by Dutch international midfielder Ronald de Boer (pictured).

Sensational ★★★ Stimulating ★★ Satisfactory ★

Aries
21 March-20 April ★★

YOU know exactly what you want, but other people keep throwing obstacles in your path. The time has come to lay all your cards on the table and to make some decisions that are based on your own best interest.

Taurus
21 April-21 May ★★

AS THE year begins, you must be careful what you wish for. You are in a perfect position to create your own destiny, but must think long and hard about the future implications of your ambitions and desires. Forewarned is forearmed!

Gemini
22 May-21 June ★★

YOU'LL be like the boy who cried wolf if you continue to provoke others or exaggerate the truth. Jupiter gives you the upper hand, but you must be honest with loved ones if you hope to convince them of your sincerity.

Cancer
22 June-23 July ★★★

WITH dependable Saturn teaching you about fidelity in relationships, some of you will forge deeper bonds with your partner while others win back the trust of a friend. You will be more of a team player during this sociable month.

Leo
24 July-23 August ★★

VENUS bolsters your ego, but adds an air of indifference that sets you apart from others. There is a fine line between confidence and cockiness this month, so temper arrogance with a touch of humility. You will be a freer spirit in 2001.

Virgo
24 August-23 September ★★

THOSE New Year resolutions may be well intentioned, but difficult to live up to. Changes you wish to make could come at a cost to loved ones, or perhaps you simply do not possess the willpower. Compromise is the only solution.

Libra
24 September-23 October ★★

START the year on a selfish note by putting your own needs first. You usually bend over backwards to keep the peace, but this month risk becoming a martyr. Bear in mind that if you are happy your loved ones will benefit.

Scorpio
24 October-22 November ★★

BY FAIR means or foul, you have manipulated a situation to your own advantage. However, it may seem like a hollow victory once the emotional backlash hits. To redeem yourself, take responsibility for your actions.

Sagittarius
23 November-22 December ★★

AFTER the hype of the holiday period, the weeks ahead may seem an anti-climax. The secret is to create your own fun without making waves in a relationship. A little harmless flirtation could add interest, provided you don't get carried away!

Capricorn
23 December-20 January ★★★

YOU'RE normally a stickler for the rules, but this month you won't mind bending a few to achieve your aims. The planets render you both cheeky and clever, an interesting combination that will make you appear more alluring to others.

Aquarius
21 January-19 February ★★

VOLATILE Mars hovering overhead makes you feel restless and edgy. And while your love life may be flowing smoothly, you definitely need more space this month. For sanity's sake, encourage your partner to cultivate his or her own interests.

Pisces
20 February-20 March ★★

THE fickle finger of fate has played havoc with your life lately, guiding you along the right path one minute and forcing you to change course the next. Fortunately, yours is a flexible sign and you have little trouble going with the flow.

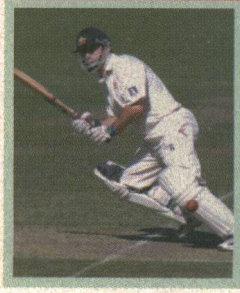
WORLD CRICKET CENTRE: AUSTRALIA V WEST INDIES – FIFTH TEST
SKY SPORTS 3 7.00PM



The West Indies bid to make an impression on the world's best in the fifth and final Test against Australia at the Sydney Cricket Ground. The hard-fought series has been a showcase for some of the world's top players such as Australia's Steve Waugh (pictured, left). The Windies (whose Ridley Jacobs is pictured, right) may not have as many world-class players as the men from down under, but they have the makings of a side set for greatness once again.

Saturday 6th January-Friday 12th January

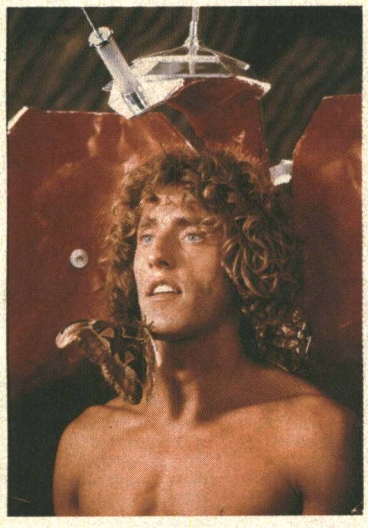
The Ewings return

American supersoap Dallas is now fondly remembered as something of a camp classic, thanks to its often outrageously overwrought acting, unabashedly melodramatic story lines – which explored themes of lust, greed and betrayal – and, of course, its pumped-up shoulder pads. But in its day, the series about powerful oil family the Ewings was a bonafide global phenomenon. Indeed, its boldest and most famous cliffhanger story line, concerning the shooting of the show's boo-hiss villain, JR Ewing (wonderfully incarnated by Larry Hagman), spawned a slew of merchandise, including Who Shot JR? mugs and T-shirts. It was a brilliantly manipulative and skilfully publicised plot, and audiences lapped it up. The whole Who Shot JR? saga is now legend; in fact, it received the ultimate accolade five years ago when The Simpsons spoofed it with its Who Shot Mr Burns? episodes. Surprisingly, JR's shooting was not something that had long been in the pipeline; it came about when the show's channel, CBS, demanded a couple of extra episodes and the creative talent behind Dallas decided it was a great time for the dastardly character to get his comeuppance. So who did kill JR? Tune into UK Gold's rerun of the series from this month and find out for yourself.

UK Gold, weekdays from Monday 8th, 11.00am and 5.00pm

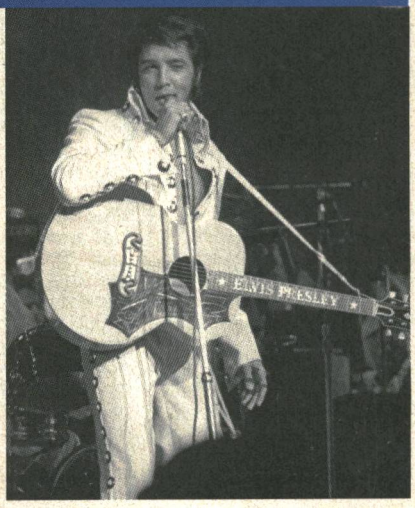
A night at the rock opera

The Who's rock opera Tommy gets a grotesquely imaginative big-screen make-over by controversy-courting director Ken Russell. Told entirely in song, the film pins down in perversely entertaining terms the tale that unfolded on the 1969 double album. The title character is left deaf, dumb and blind after a childhood trauma; played by The Who's Roger Daltrey, Tommy gains fame as a pinball prodigy, but he soon emerges from his 'wild vibration land', regaining his hearing, speech and sight, and becomes a messianic figure whose followers flock to his holiday camp retreat. Ambitious, and with moments of haunting, lyrical beauty light years away from the group's angry, three-minute mod anthems of the mid-1960s, Tommy was the culmination of songwriter Pete Townshend's experimentations with the pop song. He'd already hinted at things to come with his disjointed mini-rock opera A Quick One, while He's Away on the album A Quick One, and the more satisfying Rael (which included musical motifs that would be honed and reused on Tommy), from The Who Sell Out. Russell's film on the other hand is a riot of delirious, deliberately shocking images, but there are many guilty pleasures in the director's cinematic orgy of excess, including Elton John, clad in gigantic bovver boy boots, belting out Pinball Wizard, and Who drummer Keith Moon relishing his role as the quintessential dirty old man, Uncle Ernie.



Carlton Cinema, Sunday 7th, 11.00pm

Way to go, Elvis!



The subject of an extensive overhaul at the behest of TCM, Elvis – That's the Way it Is, an engaging, albeit rose-tinted, documentary account of Presley's Summer Festival engagement at the International Hotel, Las Vegas, has been boosted by around 40 per cent of new material. Director Denis Sanders demonstrates a keen sense of composition, occasionally experimenting with a multiple point-of-view process. The choice of interview subjects is also unpredictably offbeat, including smiling newlyweds who are celebrating their first night of matrimonial bliss at the show. But Sanders's fly-on-the-wall-style footage is too mannered and slickly staged to convince, and he intrudes on the concert sequences with ill-matched cutaways to the audience, obviously reacting to different songs from those we're hearing on the soundtrack. Still, Presley looks fantastic (as the groom of the aforementioned married couple says outside the chapel, 'The old dad hasn't lost it'), a sexy, energetic, jump-suited Vegas showman who sends female fans into a frenzy and demonstrates a sense of self-deprecating humour in his between-song patter. And he's in truly fine voice, too, sounding equally convincing with dramatic power ballads (You've Lost that Loving Feeling), uptempo soul stompers (Patch it Up), and dirty rock 'n' roll (Heartbreak Hotel).

The Lancastrian also made his mark in the World Superbike Championship with two victories, which could be a step towards succeeding Carl Fogarty, who retired last September.

Last season's winners Chelsea (pictured) are just one club that would certainly not fancy a trip to a muddy non-league ground on a wintry day.

Buzz Lightyear, the bold action figure in the Toy Story films, now stars as a real superhero in his own series. And this time, writes Hilary Bonner, the gadgets work perfectly!

Lightyear's ahead

HE'S BACK by popular demand! Buzz Lightyear, the plastic spaceman in the Toy Story films, who always believed he was more than just a toy has been brilliantly brought to life – well cartoon life, anyway – as an all-action superhero. After all, this is what he was made for!

Buzz is the star of a new Disney and Pixar spin-off TV series, Buzz Lightyear of Star Command, and fans of the funny, sometimes sad, spaceman can follow his adventures (to infinity and beyond!) in 65 episodes starting this month.

Explains co-producer Mark McCorkle: 'In Toy Story poor Buzz doesn't know that he can't fly, can't use his laser gun. In Star Command he can do anything, including using his laser.'

While in the films Buzz is the subject of many jokes, in the series he is very much the respected hero. In scenes reminiscent of the opening sequence of Toy Story 2, Buzz the Space Ranger fights for the good of the universe, and goes about foiling the plans of his archenemy, the Evil Emperor Zurg (pictured above, with Buzz).

'Buzz is a living legend,' says Mark. 'Every time he walks through Star Command they all salute. He is their Captain Kirk.'

And if you've ever wondered what the young Buzz looked like, then stay tuned – the TV series rewinds to his childhood! What you will never see, however, is his hair, because his head is always covered by the sleek hood beneath his helmet. 'That's one of our little jokes,' smiles Mark. 'Cartoons are supposed to be funny, after all!'

Tim Allen, one of Hollywood's hottest names, was unable to guarantee the time to voice Buzz in the TV series, as he did in the Toy Story films.

The unenviable task of following on from him went to Patrick Warburton, who admits that he was a little apprehensive about taking over from Allen, but says: 'I knew that the trick was to do it my way and not try to imitate Tim.'

Coincidentally, after working on the series, Patrick went on to star with Tim in the forthcoming film Big Trouble.

'I went up to him and said, "Wow, there's the original Buzz Lightyear,"' says Patrick. 'He came back at me by telling me that I certainly looked more like Buzz than he does.

'I should have told him that he was just a toy. I'm the real Buzz Lightyear!'

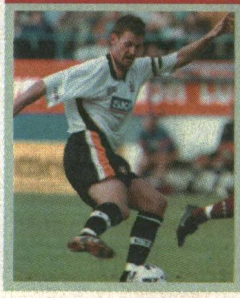
LIVE LUTON TOWN V WYCOMBE WANDERERS SKY SPORTS 2 7.00PM



It's a Bedfordshire v Buckinghamshire clash as Wycombe Wanderers (whose Paul McCarthy is pictured, right) visit Kenilworth Road to take on Luton Town. The visitors have failed to defeat their Division Two opponents in the past nine league matches. In fact, it was Luton who robbed them of a chance of going top of the table back in August when a late header led to a 1-1 draw. The Hatters will be looking to Paul McClaren (pictured, left) to marshal the midfield.

If you go down in the woods ...

It's now pretty much common knowledge that The Blair Witch Project isn't the startlingly original work that many of its admirers once thought. But that still doesn't detract from the fact that this small, independent chiller packs a mighty punch. What we see is the disturbing, supposedly found, footage shot by three students who journeyed deep into some woods in Maryland to make a film about the local folk tale of the Blair Witch. They never returned. The subjective, documentary-style camerawork (allegedly inspired by the likes of the remarkably similar no-budget thriller The Last Broadcast and the Italian exploitation nasty Cannibal Holocaust) gives The Blair Witch Project a nerve-shredding, you-are-there-immediacy. And the idea of a group of people becoming victim to all sorts of sinister goings-on in the woods taps into a common fear of many urbanites that has been exploited in such works as The Last House on the Left and The Evil Dead. The Blair Witch Project is that rare thing: a movie made on a shoestring that transcended its humble origins to become a bona fide 'event' movie. The film's defiant anti-style stance (constantly shaky, poor quality, handheld camerawork; muffled, improvised dialogue; lack of music; no special effects; stark credits) certainly doesn't conform to Hollywood's idea of how a horror movie should be presented. But then The Blair Witch Project succeeds in summoning up a genuinely ominous atmosphere – something Tinseltown often fails to do in its jumbo-budget forays into the genre. There are no real shocks as such (it's the general sense of dread that really unsettles), though the simple, but incredibly potent, final image will haunt many a viewer.

Talk of the Town

No sooner had Martijn Reuser struck the 90th-minute goal that secured Ipswich Town's return to the Premiership in last year's First Division play-off final, than nay-saying soccer pundits had backed the Suffolk side as relegation favourites. But of the three teams promoted to the top flight (Charlton and Manchester City won automatic spots), Town have so far enjoyed the most success and, in the early half of the season, they notched up impressive wins against Leeds and Everton and well-deserved draws against Arsenal and Manchester United. Indeed, until they succumbed to a shock 1-0 home defeat to struggling Derby, Ipswich (whose Marcus Stewart is pictured) were the only team in the Premiership to have scored in every league game. One of the other low points of Town's start to the campaign was when they went down 2-1 to Leicester City at Filbert Street, so George Burley's side will be seeking revenge against the Foxes when Peter Taylor's men pay their return visit to Portman Road this Sunday.

Let's here it for Larry!

On 31 May 1998, after six seasons, American audiences bade a fond farewell to one of its great cult successes of 1990s television, as Garry Shandling, star of The Larry Sanders Show, called it quits. In an hour-long finale, packed with A-list guest stars, including Jim Carrey, Warren Beatty and Sean Penn, Larry Sanders took one last look around his chat show studio – and there wasn't a dry eye in the house. A one-time talk show host himself, Shandling launched the self-centred Sanders in August 1992. Jeffrey Tambor was Larry's obsequious sidekick, Hank. Rip Torn was the protective but vulgar producer Artie. Offering viewers a seeming insider's account of the world of television, it was a splendidly caustic satire of the egotism, back stabbing and jealousy behind the scenes of a hit TV show, revealing a spectacularly funny, often ugly, ulcer-ridden Hollywood underbelly. It was an instant sensation – arguably the best sitcom on American television – but with its witty, uncensored dialogue, unsympathetic characters and absence of canned laughter, it was also the most groundbreaking. Its annual Emmy snub was a rare failure for a show hailed as masterful. This week UK Play turns back the clock with the show's very first episode. William Shatner, Dana Carvey, Robin Williams and George Foreman all appear as themselves during this series.

12.00 NIGHT TIME

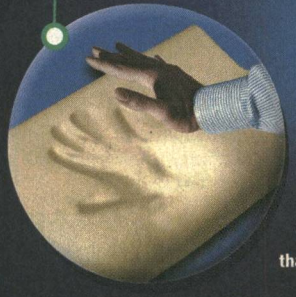
Eight hours on a mattress doesn't have to be a nightmare

Not only is the TEMPUR® mattress a first class ticket to a deep and restful night's sleep, its benefits to your health are long and lasting:

- Relieves back pain and aching joints
- Can help relieve arthritic and rheumatic conditions
- Reduces stress and gives better quality sleep
- Superior comfort to pocket spring or latex mattresses
- Relieves sciatic pain
- Hypo-allergenic
- Gives pressure relief



TEMPUR® - the material that moulds to your body

We spend about a third of our lives asleep, and yet how many of us invest properly in revitalising our bodies during that time?

On a TEMPUR® Mattress the nightmare of restless nights and waking stiff and unrested soon becomes a thing of the past. Unlike any other mattress, the TEMPUR® is made from a unique pressure-relieving material that truly adapts to your body rather than asking your body to conform to it.

By distributing your weight evenly, the TEMPUR® Mattress decreases pressure at trouble spots like the shoulders, hips, knees and ankles as well as giving support to the neck and back.

Clinical trials show that the TEMPUR® Mattress reduces tossing and turning during the night by 80% compared to a typical pocket spring or latex mattress - because blood flow is not restricted.

RECOMMENDED BY OVER 25,000 MEDICAL PROFESSIONALS

Over 25,000 medical professionals worldwide recommend the TEMPUR® Mattress and Neck Pillow to patients suffering from sleep difficulties, back, joint or neck pain - in fact, anyone needing a better night's sleep.

A development from the NASA Space Programme

60 NIGHT NO RISK TRIAL!

For just a 10% deposit you can try the TEMPUR Mattress in your own home for 60 nights. If, at the end of that period the TEMPUR® hasn't made a lasting impression on your well-being, we will refund your deposit. You have nothing to lose but restless sleep!

Vicki Butler-Henderson
GIRL RACER

A winter motorland

It's tempting to jump into a car to travel the shortest distance at this time of year. Vicky Butler-Henderson offers advice on safe and smooth winter driving

WHEN I'M filming for Top Gear, I usually leave home at 6.00am. And if Jack Frost has been whizzing over the car during the night, he costs me a good few minutes of sleep as I am forced to scrape his evidence from the windows in the mornings.

Precautionary motoring matters are essential during the bleak midwinter, so here's a short list of auto must-dos before you battle with all things frozen:

BATTERY Make sure it's topped up with distilled water (available from petrol stations). If you've got an old battery, get it checked at your local garage, as it might need replacing.

ANTI-FREEZE Best to go to your local garage to check the concentration of anti-freeze is correct for winter.

WASHER FLUID Don't forget to add some of this to your windscreen washer tank when filling it.

TYRES It's particularly important to make sure your tyre pressures are as the manufacturer recommends, because they'll give maximum grip and stability when at their optimum pressures.

All those little jobs can go a long way to making your winter trips run smoothly, even if the frost and ice won't.

The best advice I can give if you realize you're driving over a patch of ice is, DON'T brake! Keep the throttle steady and keep the steering wheel steady. That way, by the time you've crossed over the ice and the car regains grip, you'll be heading where you want to be.

If you brake, steer violently or snatch your foot off the throttle, the car could end up pointing into a hedge, or back in the direction you came from. If you find yourself starting to skid then, again, don't be tempted to brake immediately.

'If you realize you're driving over a patch of ice, don't brake'

Most cars are front-wheel-drive (FWD), which means the engine's power is fed to the front wheels. In a skid, the most common characteristic of a FWD car is for it to understeer, which is where the front end ploughs on when it's lost grip going round a bend. This is easily controlled if you gently and progressively lift off the gas a bit. Don't remove your foot entirely, though! Once the car begins to slow down, it'll straighten itself up and you can gently add some more throttle and begin to power away and steer once more.

But remember that you must always be smooth with EVERYTHING when you're driving in wet and cold conditions. Brake gently but firmly, accelerate progressively, and do any gear changes before you start to turn the steering wheel into a bend, or roundabout.

So, what's the best car to drive during the ensuing winter months? Probably the most sure-footed machine is anything with four-wheel-drive (4x4), where the engine's power is delivered to all four wheels.

The new BMW X5 is a good-looking beast and is excellent to drive but costs a pretty penny. Audi has an unblemished reputation for producing quality 4x4s, and its quattro system can be seen across the whole range. The new A6, a large estate model, has a higher ground clearance than normal.

If you want to spice things up a little, though, then my top choice of 4x4s is the Subaru Impreza Turbo. The large front headlights aren't terribly attractive but the turbo-charged 2.0-litre engine and reassuring chassis will turn that ice into fire.

In Now And Again, Eric Close plays a 45-year-old man trapped in the body of a 26-year-old, in a covert Government experiment. As he tells Paul Simpson, it's as confusing as it sounds

LIFE AFTER DEATH

WHAT would you do if everyone who knew you believed you were dead – that you were the victim of a tragic accident on the subway? If your wife was starting her life over again but the insurance company that you used to work for is trying to chisel its way out of paying on your life insurance policy because they think you were suicidal?

That's the situation facing Michael Wiseman, a 45-year-old insurance executive who wakes up after falling under a subway train, and finds himself in the body of a 26-year-old man (played by Dark Skies' Eric Close). A secret Government agency has spent billions on creating the perfect human being, and Michael is now as close to being Superman as New York, at the turn-of-the-millennium, is likely to see.

'I went in and met with Glenn Caron,' Eric Close recalls, 'and he called me the next day and asked me to play the part of Michael Wiseman.'

Glenn Gordon Caron is best known as the creator of the Bruce Willis/Cybill Shepherd comedy drama Moonlighting, and it was the strength of the script that Caron had prepared for Now and Again's pilot that attracted Close, comedy actor John Goodman – who plays the initial, corpulent version of Michael – and Independence Day's Margaret Colin to the show.

Although Michael has the capacity to be a Superman, his first concern is his family. 'His main focus is his family's safety,' Close explains, 'and his hope that he can be together with them again. It becomes increasingly more difficult for that to happen. I know they were hoping to explore the dark side of what Michael was experiencing in this new life of his. It's hard to know that you have a family out there and theoretically you are still alive, yet you can't see them. I know Glenn wanted to continue to explore Michael's psyche regarding those things.

'A lot of people thought it would be a good idea if the doctor just went ahead and let Michael and Lisa get together, as long as he promises never to say anything,' Close adds.

'Michael can go on being a superhero, he can stop breaking out of the town house and he can be with his wife. Why not bring her into the fold? Why is it so important to keep the two of them apart? She could become part of what was going on and be more involved with the adventures of Michael Wiseman.'

One of the hardest parts of playing Michael for Close was 'staying away from the craft service table!' he jokes. 'I had to remain in really good physical condition, and with the level I was working out, and the hours I was working, it was really difficult. I guess I enjoyed it, but not all the time. There were times when I was really restricted to just eating broccoli for breakfast, and that was pretty tough in the beginning.' The regime paid off, however, as Close performs most of his own stunts, including carrying a man up an elevator shaft, and swinging on a cable from the New York Stock Exchange building. 'I thoroughly enjoy doing the physical stuff,' he says.

Saturday 20th January-Wednesday 31st January

Ambulance chaser

For Casino, his 1995 return to the gangster milieu, Martin Scorsese defiantly covered similar thematic and stylistic ground to that of his 1990 GoodFellas. But the director emerged triumphant with a film that works as a companion piece while still succeeding on its own terms. In Bringing Out the Dead, Scorsese makes repeated references to his 1976 study in urban alienation, Taxi Driver. There are the kaleidoscopic images of neon-soaked streets; the emotionally unstable lead (Nicolas Cage, as a paramedic haunted by the ghosts of those he could not save); the woman he feels compelled to help (Cage's real-life wife Patricia Arquette); and the use of Van Morrison's doom-laden blues epic TB Sheets, which, Scorsese has said, influenced the atmosphere of Taxi Driver. But in this film, Scorsese's self-quoting comes across as wistful reminiscing about past glories. The film demonstrates his visual virtuosity, and Cage's essay in both-ends-burning exhaustion rates among his best work. But this adaptation of Joe Connelly's novel lacks the perversely personal punch of Taxi Driver and we are left to marvel at the consummate skill with which the director goes through the motions.

He's no ordinary Joe

The Clash first found fame as part of the punk movement before going on to record a host of consummately crafted pop songs that have elevated them among the ranks of the finest British bands. If Clash songsmiths Joe Strummer (right) and Mick Jones were the Lennon and McCartney of punk, then the 1979 double album London Calling was The Clash's Sgt Pepper. It may have arrived at the tail end of the decade, but London Calling has been hailed as one of the key albums of the 1970s. From the apocalyptic title track, through the good-time reggae of Rudie Can't Fail and the bubble-gum pop of Train in Vain, the album is a genuine treat that never seems to date. Even if the group were to be judged on this work alone, then their place in rock history would be assured. Strummer discusses The Clash in VH1's Planet Rock Profiles. He talks candidly about his incredibly intuitive songwriting partnership with Jones, as well as Jones's regular bust-ups with manager Bernie Rhodes, and he maintains there are people in his old stomping ground of west London who still refuse to speak to him after he defected from 'hippie-squat rock' to punk.

Among Giants, Sky Premier 8.00pm
From the writer of The Full Monty, this story of Sheffield workers painting high-tension pylons may disappoint. Despite an excellent cast (Pete Postlethwaite, Rachel Griffiths and James Thornton), it's a quirky love story that just doesn't quite gel.

GENERAL

The Jerry Springer Show Living 10.20am, 6.10pm
The show that goes below the belt now gets even dirtier with the Springercam, a detective device which catches cheating lovers in the act. Welcome to the new look Jerry Springer Show. It's hard to believe he was once a civil rights activist.

SIXTH ONE-DAY INTERNATIONAL – WEST INDIES V ZIMBABWE
SKY SPORTS 2 7.00PM

The West Indies had something of a torrid time down under this winter in the Test series against Australia, so taking part in the Carlton Series – a triangular one-day international tournament – may proffer relief. New Windies stars like Ramnaresh Sarwan (pictured) have an ideal opportunity to make a name for themselves against Zimbabwe, a tough, but hardly unbeatable team, while a few runs from Brian Lara would not go amiss in this day/night match in Sydney.

Introducing...

A History of Britain's Steam Railways

Twenty-four superb medallions, expertly crafted in solid bronze and presented in a handsome showcase.

Britain is the proud home of steam locomotion. The great British engines were glorious achievements... masterpieces of design and engineering... awesome in their power, speed and beauty. Now a superb collection of specially minted, solid bronze medallions traces the history of Britain's railways and celebrates their most famous steam engines.

Legendary locomotives

A History of Britain's Steam Railways includes many of the truly great locomotives, from George Stephenson's Rocket, through the Flying Scotsman to the Evening Star.

Each medallion is an impressive 1 3/4 inches in diameter. Both sides feature medallic sculpting of the very highest quality. One bears a raised relief image of a legendary steam locomotive and key facts about it. On the reverse is the handsome crest of the commissioning railway company – recreated in perfect detail.

LIVE FORD GOLF USA: PHOENIX OPEN SKY SPORTS 2 8.00PM

A huge home crowd watched local golfer Tom Lehman (pictured) scoop the $576,000 winner's share of the Phoenix Open in Scottsdale, Arizona, last year. It was a welcome win which broke a four-year drought for Lehman, but it was only clinched when the Australian Robert Allenby bogeyed the final hole. Lehman's previous title win was the The TOUR Championship in 1996. This $4m tournament is claimed to be the best attended golf tournament in the world.

ROSWELL IS NIGH

I LOVE all the WB and Fox favourites that come to Sky One, making it the best channel. I watch Angel, Buffy, The X-Files, Roswell, Popular, The Simpsons, King of the Hill, Futurama, and Malcolm in the Middle ... I'm an absolute fanatic! Since Sky One is bringing back Angel and Buffy, and Roswell started with them last January, is the channel going to show the new series of Roswell?

Birungi Kawooya, e-mail

● The new second series of* Roswell will be on Sky One from February. And check out pages 6 and 7 for our feature on Buffy and Angel.

MELROSE PLACE WILL BE BACK!

WHAT has happened to my favourite show, Melrose Place? I used to enjoy watching it on Saturdays on Sky One, then it was on Sundays at 3.00pm. Now it has disappeared completely in favour of Star Trek, whose fans can surely see plenty of their programmes, whereas we Melrose-starved fans can only wring our hands in despair! Please bring it back asap. We were in the middle of loads of good story lines and it was getting better and better.

Miriam Hull, London

● Viewers won't have too long to wait, as the residents of* Melrose Place *will return to Sky One in February to conclude the current series.

JACK AND JILL ON SONG

I'M A BIG FAN of the Jack and Jill series on Sky One, and I really like the song on the opening credits. I tried looking at the end credits for the details, and I think the artist is Pancho's Lament, but they didn't write the title of the song. I hope you can let me know the title and if I'm right about the artist's name.

Joelle Mantoura, e-mail

● The song on* Jack and Jill is indeed by Pancho's Lament and it's called Truth about Romeo.

Alien-nation: The cast of Roswell will be back with more teen angst in the new, second series of the hit show

There's a £50 prize for the star letter!

POKÉMON AND ON

WHEN I got home from school I was able to watch new episodes of Pokémon, but as the days went by I started to see the same episodes over and over again. I don't watch it any more and even my dad, who only ever watches it now and then, has seen them all. So, please, Sky, either put on new episodes of Pokémon or replace it with something else.

Richard Freakley e-mail

● Brand new episodes from the third series of* Pokémon *will be on Sky One from this month – and fans can rest assured that they'll be well worth the wait!

GETTING IN A SPIN FOR SHEEN

CAN you tell me when we will be seeing the new series of Spin City, with Charlie Sheen?

Ron Cummings, e-mail

● This series is set to premiere on Paramount Comedy Channel in May.

LON'S SILENCE IS GOLDEN

MANY THANKS to TCM for featuring Lon Chaney [pictured right] as their Star of the Month, with a season of his films. I am a big fan of silent films, and Lon Chaney in particular. It was great to see films such as The Unknown and Mr Wu for the first time, and the Chaney Close-up documentary gave a fascinating insight into a truly unique artist.

A RECIPE FOR SUCCESS?

WHY, when watching cookery programmes, are recipes usually made with ingredients that are of the best quality or the most expensive? A large number of people just do not have the money or time, after finishing work, to stand in the kitchen preparing a meal. Bearing in mind that in a lot of families both parents work and there are usually boisterous, hungry children running around, a realistic programme may appeal to many people.

S Rees Lancashire

● Congratulations, you've won the £50 prize for this month's star letter!
Celebrity chef Valentina Harris may well have something to suit your taste on Carlton Food Network this month! In* Classic Dishes, *on Saturday 27th (at 10.30am and 4.00pm), you can learn some of her culinary secrets as she shows how to cook a mushroom risotto, one of her favourite classic dishes, step-by-step.

DBZ ATTRACTS A MATURE AUDIENCE

I LOVE Dragonball Z, but I am 14, and it is very hard to watch it and be accepted by my peers. Cartoon Network has recently made this much more difficult. You can imagine my shock, when I opened December's issue of Cable Guide to find that on Monday 18th, Cartoon Network was planning to show Dragonball Z at the earlier time of 3.00pm. I go to high school and we finish at 3.30pm, so when they show the next two sagas, I won't be able to watch them. And it isn't always possible to watch Rewind on Saturdays and Sundays, especially when you happen to be in a family of five. Could Cartoon Network please take into account the needs and wants of its older, devoted viewers?

Kirsty Graham, e-mail

● Cartoon Network responds: 'We are doing our very best to bring* Dragonball Z to all its fans at various times, which is one of the reasons why Dragonball Z – Rewind is on at the weekends. However, Dragonball Z will be back at a later time in January as part of the new action adventure slot Toonami, where you can also catch new anime series Gundam Wing this month, and Tenchi Muyo *in February.'

DRAGONBALL Z is brilliant! It really is a cartoon of epic proportions and should appeal to kids and twentysomethings alike. With so many different characters, story lines and events it's no wonder the saga leaves me begging for more, and it's refreshing to see a serious cartoon that doesn't take itself too seriously. Apparently, Dragonball Z is huge in America, so take note, Cartoon Network, and show us the rest of the series!
